

TABLE OF CONTENTS

ABSTRACT	vii
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	ix
1 INTRODUCTION
1 Left Dislocation in Czech.....	1
2 Previous Research on Czech.....	4
3 Organization of the Dissertation.....	6
2 THE SYNTAX OF THE LEFT PERIPHERY
1 Introduction.....	9
2 Clause Structural Assumptions.....	10
3 Identifying the Clause-Initial Position: Clitics in I ⁰	13
4 Locating the Lexical Verb in v ⁰	15
4.1 VP adverbs.....	16
4.2 VP Ellipsis.....	20
5 The Left Periphery: Discoursal-syntactic mapping.....	22
5.1 Discourse function and [Spec, IP].....	23
5.2 V ⁰ -I Raising: Satisfying the EPP.....	28
6 Discoursally Motivated A-bar Movement.....	32
6.1 Wh-movement.....	33
6.2 Focus.....	39
6.3 Contrastive Topicalization.....	39
6.3.1 Weak Crossover.....	42
6.3.2 The operator-variable nature of Contrastive Topicalization.....	45
6.3.3 Syntactic analysis of CT constructions.....	47
7 Another Look at Multiple Wh-Questions.....	48
7.1 Multiple pre-clitic XP's.....	49

7.2	The position of non-initial wh-phrases.....	52
8	Conclusion.....	53
3	THE SYNTAX OF LEFT DISLOCATION
1	Overview of left dislocation in Czech.....	55
2	Grohmann 2003 and left dislocation in German.....	58
3	Syntactic Approach to Left Dislocation in Czech.....	61
4	Evidence for a Movement Account of CLD.....	63
4.1	Conditions A and C.....	64
4.2	Quantifier binding.....	66
5	Evidence for Non-Movement Analyses of HTLD I, II.....	67
5.1	Reconstruction and HTLD I.....	68
5.2	Reconstruction and HTLD II.....	69
5.3	Conclusion.....	71
6	Gender and Resumption.....	72
7	Phrasal Categories.....	75
8	Evidence for A-bar Movement of Resumptive Pronouns.....	79
8.1	Long distance dependencies.....	80
8.2	Island sensitivity.....	83
9	Syntactic Positions of CLD and HTLD I, II.....	85
9.1	The left periphery.....	85
9.2	Embedded clauses.....	88
9.3	The syntax of HTLD.....	91
10	Conclusion.....	93
4	THE DISCOURSE FUNCTIONS OF LEFT DISLOCATION
1	Introduction.....	95
2	Contrastive Topic.....	97
2.1	Prince 1981, 1997.....	100
2.2	Hajičová and Sgall 2004.....	102

2.3	Büring 2003.....	105
2.3.1	Discourse Trees.....	106
2.3.2	CT Congruence.....	108
2.3.3	Focus on clausal polarity.....	113
2.3.4	Conversational implicature vs. conventional meaning.....	114
3	CLD as Contrastive Topic Marking.....	117
3.1	Overview of the discourse function of CLD.....	118
3.2	Conversational implicature vs. conventional meaning.....	125
3.3	Conclusion.....	128
4	The Discourse Function of HTLD.....	129
4.1	Overview of the requirements of ‘topic promotion’.....	132
4.2	The preceding context.....	133
4.3	Perseveration in the discourse.....	136
4.4	Considering HTLD II.....	139
4.4	Conclusion.....	140
5	Conclusion.....	141

5 THE SYNTAX OF RESUMPTION

1	Introduction.....	144
2	CLD: Locating the CT interpretation in [Spec, IP].....	145
2.1	Prosodic realization of Contrastive Topic.....	146
2.2	Comparing CLD and HTLD II.....	152
2.3	Interpretation of [Spec, TopP].....	154
3	The Syntax of CLD.....	156
4	Resumption at the Syntax-Phonology Interface.....	160
4.1	V(P) Fronting in Hebrew.....	161
4.2	PF requirements on spell out in Czech CLD.....	165
4.2.1	Pronouncing the top copy.....	166
4.2.2	Pronouncing the resumptive.....	168

5	Spelling Out the Resumptive Pronoun.....	170
5.1	Resumption as partial spell out of movement copies.....	170
5.1.1	Grammatical gender matching.....	172
5.2	Why a demonstrative pronoun?.....	173
6	Resuming other Categories.....	176
6.1	Properties and propositions.....	178
6.2	Manner, place and time adverbials.....	180
6.3	Prepositional Phrases.....	182
6.4	Conclusion.....	183
7	Previous Accounts of Resumptive Spell out.....	184
8	Conclusion.....	188
6	CONCLUSION
1	Overview.....	190
2	Syntax and Pragmatics of Left Dislocation in Czech.....	191
2.1	Movement vs. non-movement derivations.....	192
2.2	The pragmatics of left dislocation.....	192
3	The Syntax of Resumption.....	193
4	Conclusion.....	194
	BIBLIOGRAPHY.....	196